

SPEECH OF THOMAS

Temporary Chairman of the Democratic National Convention.

THE PARTY OF THE PEOPLE.

Expatriates on the "Grand and Glorious Principles" of the Party of Jefferson—Industrial Disputes as Against the Liberty of the Citizen.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 4.—The Democratic national convention met from noon to-day. Senator James K. Jones, of Arkansas, chairman of the national committee, called the convention to order. The hall was packed. After Chairman Jones rapped for order the Declaration of Independence was read amid cheers. Then Mayor Rose made an address of welcome and Chairman Jones introduced Governor Charles S. Thomas, of Colorado, as temporary chairman. Governor Thomas said in part:

"We meet under most auspicious influences. On the nation's birthday, in a great central city of the republic, at the close and opening of a century, we come together to reaffirm our allegiance to the principles of Thomas Jefferson and our loyalty to their greatest living exponent. We have been selected by the farmer and the artisan, the miner and the mechanic, the producers of wealth in every state and territory of this mighty nation, to register a decree they have already determined, to proclaim a candidate they have already chosen. We come not with the pomp and circumstance of consolidated wealth, but as the delegates of the plain people who believe that all men were created equal and that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. We are not here as the representatives of the vast interests which dominate every industrial life, but as the champions of the individual citizen who stands helpless in their presence. We speak not for those who would pile up the finances of the world upon a single metal, supplementing its inadequacy by a paper currency issued by a private monopoly at the expense of the people, but for the millions who believe in the money of the constitution and in the ability of the countrymen to legislate for themselves without the previous permission of foreign parliaments, potentates or princes."

Party of the People.

"We are in very truth the party of the people. Our declaration of faith and purpose given to the world four years ago has strengthened by the passage of years and is enshrined today in our hearts and hopes. It marked an epoch in political history and symbolizes the regeneration of the party whose birth was coeval with the birth of the nation whose death that union cannot long survive. It crystallized into an undying creed the precepts of our founders—reaffirmed the objects of democratic organization and proclaimed democracy to be no longer a name, but a great, great spirit and a living heart."

Face to Face With Great Conditions.

"The close of President Harrison's administration found the country face to face with conditions of the greatest moment. A deficiency in the public revenues through the reckless legislation and profligate extravagance of the Fifty-first Congress had become apparent in the preceding October. A bond issue, prepared in February, was postponed as a legacy to the incoming administration. Trade and industry, long stimulated by unequal tariff laws, were staggering toward a crisis. Monetary conditions disturbed and uncertain threatened early disaster. The storm came in June, when the elements long pent up and long accumulating, burst in fury upon the continent."

Overwhelmed Branches of Industry.

"It shook the foundation of our commercial fabric, overwhelmed every branch of trade and industry and spread bankruptcy and dissolution rife. Its subsidence was the work of years. The misery and ruin it inflicted was fresh in the minds and hearts of the people. The country slowly emerged from the receding flood, the stricken nation struggled to its feet and painfully began the work of economic reconstruction, while statesmen discussed the causes of our calamity. In the agony of our suffering they clearly perceived and freely acknowledged its primal source, a vicious and indefensible monetary system. Men differed as to the method of the reformation not as to the necessity for a change. They were anguished over the moribund standards, but united in condemning an unsound and artificial financial system the logical outcome of whose operation was inevitable disaster."

Political Lines Became Defined.

"The line of division between political forces became therefore, sharply defined in 1896 upon what was called the money question. That question involved, as we then asserted and as we now know, every other economic problem. It embraced within its wide limitations the issues of labor and capital, of combination and competition, of production, transportation and distribution. It was predicted that the defeat of bimetalism would be followed by the retirement of all forms of government currency, by the dedication of power to the holder of the national obligations and the principal consolidation of all lines of transportation and the consequent domination of every commercial pursuit by a score of colossal monopolies. These predictions have in general been verified."

March of Consolidation Resumed.

"Democratic defeat had scarcely been recorded when the march of consolidation was resumed. Every pursuit that engages the attention of man has been exploited, capitalized and appropriated. The earth and the waters roundabout it have been explored for subjects of monopoly and those who have thundered against unsound money have used the printing press and the engraver's art to turn out thousands of millions of fictitious values, to whose profits the toilers and consumers pay constant tribute.

All the Avenues Closed.

"Every avenue is closed to the competitive energies of the citizen; has been listed on the stock exchange and risks and falls with the turn of gamblers' cards. Consolidations succeed consolidations and so as they lessen in number they enlarge in the volume of their real and fictitious accumulations and their more despotic sway over all material and political interests. These evils, startling in their magnitude and inevitable in their consequences must culminate in one immense aggregation, all-powerful and all-absorbing to be arrested and dissolved by the force of an aroused public opinion finding expression at the polls in support of the nominees of this convention."

Onward March of Organized Wealth.

"The party in power carried the last election by and through the support of the influences which we criticize. Having purchased the right to pursue their various objects, the government has been at all times their powerful ally. Hence the onward march of organized wealth to absolute power and the exaltation of the dollar above the rights and the welfare of the multitude. Hence, the crisis in our commercial affairs, whose issue, presented in acute form to the voters of 1896, is that of industrial despotism as against the liberty of the citizen."

After the explosion the police searched the neighborhood and confiscated over a ton of dynamite crackers and other dangerous explosives.

How a Kansas Farmer Goes to Paris.

Kansas City (Mo.) Journal: John DeMain, a farmer of Edwards county, Kansas, is preparing to visit the Paris exposition under circumstances that will contrast strangely with a similar visit made in 1860. In that year DeMain was a poor boy, and he tramped from his home in Belgium to the show at the French capital. A little later crossing over into America. Now he is going back with his pockets crammed with Kansas money, and possessed of a wild and exhilarating determination to have his boots blacked twice a day.

CORNER STONE

Of the New Capitol Annex Laid With Appropriate Ceremonies—Governor Atkinson Orator of the Day. Large Numbers Present at the Exercises.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE INTELLIGENCER.

CHARLESTON, W. V., July 4.—The corner-stone of the new capitol annex building was laid with imposing ceremonies by the Grand Lodge of Free Masons to-day. Most of the officers of the grand lodge were present, and several hundred Masons from different sections of this portion of the state were here. The procession was formed at the Masonic Temple at 10 a. m., and marched directly to the new building. Captain Rands' company of state troops acted as escort for state officers and the grand lodge.

The members of Kanawha Commandery Knights Templar, turned out in uniform. The procession was a large one, numbering up into the thousands.

Speech Cut Short by Storm.

The weather was very hot and before the services were completed the crowd was dispersed by a very heavy rain-storm. Governor Atkinson was the orator of the day and was prevented from completing his address by the storm. The stone that was laid weighed six tons and was fully and appropriately engraved. It was the largest demonstration of the kind that has ever occurred within the limits of this state. All trains coming into the city this morning were packed with people. The copper box placed in the corner stone held a half bushel and was filled with important Masonic and state documents and newspapers published in different parts of the commonwealth.

His forbears were Scotch-Irish. His mother died somewhere between the age of 112 and 113, and his grandmother was older yet. His father met his death by being thrown from a horse when seventy. The old gentleman has a sister in Ireland, still living, who is nearly 100; a brother in Rhode Island ninety-five years old, and another brother at Lowell, Mass., who is eighty-six.

Didn't Know It Was Loaded.

BELTING, July 3.—Oma, the thirteen-year-old daughter of Nelson Booth, of this place, had her ankle shattered by the discharge of an old Confederate army pistol, which had been loaded since the war, but the fact was unknown. It was used as an ornament at the fireplace and accidentally fell among burning papers, which caused its discharge. Mrs. Booth threw the pistol out of the window and a second discharge went through the door.

"I had pains through my bowels, headache, and backache, felt tired and sleepy all the time, was troubled with the whites. I followed your advice, took your Vegetable Compound, and it did me lots of good. I now have a baby girl. I certainly believe I would have miscarried had it not been for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had a very easy time; was sick only a short time. I think your medicine is a godsend to women in the condition in which I was. I recommend it to all as the best medicine for women."—MRS. MARY LANE, Coyote, Tenn.

THIRTY-FOUR KILLED

And Eighteen Injured in a Trolley Accident—Hurled Into a Gulch 120 Feet Deep.

TACOMA, Wash., July 4.—Thirty-four men, women and children were killed and eighteen were injured, nine fatally, in the wrecking of a trolley car on the outskirts of Tacoma to-day. The names of the victims have not yet been obtained.

Happy excursionists, 194 of them, boarded a trolley car at Edison, a suburb, at 8:20 o'clock. They were en route to this city, to witness the civic parade. The car bowed along at a good speed. Where the tracks turned from Delin street the car suddenly lurched and left the rails. The motor-man was powerless to check its speed. A gulch 120 feet deep yawned below. Only a slight rail of wood ran along the edge of the precipice.

Half way down the side of the gulch projecting rocks stopped the car for a moment. Such was the force of the impact that its timbers were wrenched apart and the inside of the car crushed into a mass of flesh and blood. When the car struck the bottom of the gulch only those in the center of the car were alive. Police and firemen removed the wreckage as rapidly as possible, and carried the injured to temporary hospitals in nearby residences. The dead were placed on the bluff until removed by their friends. The bodies of the dead were shockingly mangled, most of the injured were almost beyond recognition because of frightful cuts about the head and body, from which the blood ran in streams.

STATE TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION

Meets in Annual Session—Small Attendance.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., July 4.—The State Teachers' Association, which was formed in this city thirty years ago, began its annual meeting in the high school building this afternoon, with a small attendance, though additional members are arriving on every train, and it is thought that by to-morrow morning about two hundred of the leading state instructors will be present.

The session was entirely devoted to routine business and the enrollment of delegates. After to-day the sessions, which will continue for three days, will be held in the Baptist church.

The local members of the association gave a public reception to the visitors to-night, during which addresses were made by Prof. W. M. Strass, late superintendent of public schools in this city, and Prof. Barnes, Bardett and Rivers. Refreshments and social intercourse closed the evening's entertainment.

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSON.

July 8, 1900: John VI, 22-40

Jesus the Bread of Life.

A number of the most enthusiastic of the miraculously-fed multitude bivouacked on the scene, hoping to find the Wonder-worker there when day should break. Disappointed in this, they took boats across the lake, revering the order of the day before, and expecting to outstrip Jesus if he had gone around the head of the Galilee as yet. What was their amazement to find he had already been some time in Capernaum. They suspect supernatural means, and hint it in their question. Jesus does not, however, satisfy their curiosity. That walking on the sea was one of the few esoteric miracles designed to comfort the apostolic college, on which a fierce storm would soon beat in the Master's absence. . . . Jesus dug the grave of his popularity that day. These ardent Chillys had the purple in hiding for his shoulders. To their fond eyes the long-expected star had been out of Jacob, and a mighty receptor had been lifted in Israel that should break into pieces the dynasty of the Idumean usurper. A word, a look, a beck, and the Nazarene would have been declared king. The choice for Jesus was between a diadem and a crown of thorns. . . . In a single word Jesus revealed the essentially wrong basis of this enthusiasm. It was utterly sordid and materialistic; a sensual illusion, and dangerous in the extreme; diametrically opposed to the spirit of the kingdom he had come to set up. He had not come to gratify their political ambitions, to distribute offices and emoluments among them, or feed them at the inexhaustible crib of a golden Solomonic empire. . . . He disclosed the otherworldliness of his kingdom; pictured himself as the almoner of that substance upon which an immortal life could maintain itself, a steward wearing openly the easily-legible seal of his supernatural office. The sum and substance of it all was, that they should receive him in his spiritual function to their souls. . . . The inveterate obtuseness of the natural mind. Jesus had poured miracles like a cascade of pearls from the golden urn of his omnipotence; yet, as if the past twenty-four months had been a blank, with unparalleled obliquity they ask now for a sign. They tacitly admit that he had fed them on the day before. But they mind the feast by comparison. He had given them one meal, and that, too, only of barley bread, whereas Moses had fed their fathers forty years on manna. . . . Jesus avails himself of their unmannerly allusion to outline the holy mystery of the atonement. True enough, your fathers had manna to eat; but in spite of that, they all died. There is a bread whereof, if a man eat, it will nourish him to immortal life. I am that Bread—the Father's gift to a famished world; yet, like the loaf, I too must be broken in the sublimated suffering of my cross before men can take me into themselves, through faith and with thanksgiving, as thoroughly as the eater does the bread he consumes. . . . The flood-tide suddenly ebbed, and Jesus, with the Twelve, was left stranded upon the shore. The sensually curious, the lusters after marvels and loaves and fishes, the first-century Ephraims, who hoped to use the Nazarene for the overthrow of Herod and Rome, all found nothing in him to suit their purposes, and were offended at his, to them, hard and dark sayings—now became his open and implacable foes. There was a great withdrawal, too, of those who, under the spell of false impressions, had joined themselves to the new Rabbi. That day's sermon had broken the spell, and the secession was immediate and immense. . . . The shadow of the cross was more plainly than ever outlined on Jesus' pathway that day. He spoke then, for the first time, of the traitor, and the loneliness of his heart finds vent in his pathetic "Will ye also go away?"

Teacher's Lantern.

Jesus selects the common, indispensable things as emblems of his function to the human soul—light, water, bread. Jesus is not merely a desirable, he is an absolute necessity. Without him we are not merely suffer loss, we are ourselves lost. As well expect physical life without light, water, and bread, as soul-life without him who says: "I am the light"; "Come unto me and drink"; "I am the bread."

... All that Jesus would demand is that the proportion be maintained between the material and spiritual; that the strength of our exertion bear some ratio to the worth of the thing sought. In comparison with the intensity with which we toil for the meat that endures, we should appear not to labor at all for that which perishes. . . . There must be a personal acceptance, an individual appropriation of Jesus. As well expect to have hunger appeased by looking at a loaf of bread, or thirst quenched by gazing at a glass of water, as to be nourished in our souls without taking Christ into them. We must feed on him in our hearts. . . . Moses was the human instrument. Moses did not give the bread of the wilderness. God gave both it and the living Bread. The latter is vastly superior. Those who ate manna were a small company comparatively; they ate it only forty years, and then, in spite of earth's caravan can eat for forty centuries; and not one of them dies, but all live forever. . . . Lord, evermore give us this Bread, a beautiful portion; but on the lips of those who first utter it, it was a mere shallow sentiment. They were not in such deep earnest as to meet the arduous conditions of receiving it. They were not prepared to labor for the meat which abideth unto everlasting life. . . . This is the work that ye believe; the unitive future of faith and works is here categorically affirmed. They are inseparable as light and heat in the gas-jet. You can not turn off one without the other. Faith and works are equally inseparable. They cannot be conceived of as existing apart. . . . It is indescribably reassuring to know that he who labors for the meat that endures—that he who works the work of faith—shall never reach an emergency in time, or death, or judgment, or eternity, when his soul shall be in want. He who comes to Jesus as to the living bread, the living water, shall never hunger, shall never thirst.
